Where the user can crop and save the cropped image as URL. I am using ngCrop library for image cropping. Now I want to save the cropped image to the server to save the future requests. After saving, I want to show an alert to the user so that if the user wants to crop again, then save the image again. I am not able to make the save conditional. Below is the code. $scope.maketocrop = function() { //first save the cropped image to server $scope.imageUrl = ""; if($scope.croppedImage == "croppedImage2") { $http.post("/Controller/SaveCroppedImage") .success(function (data, status, headers, config) { $window.alert("Image saved successfully"); }) .error(function (data, status, headers, config) { $window.alert("Could not save image"); }); } } I want to prevent the further code from executing after saving the image. A: You should change your logic to $scope.maketocrop = function () { // first save the cropped image to server $scope.imageUrl = ""
